THE TOOLS THAT EVERY GLOBAL PROFESSIONAL NEEDS

In a world where change is the only constant, is it time to broaden your knowledge base and strengthen your expertise? If so, it may be the right time for you to pursue an Executive MBA. Fordham University’s Graduate School of Business Administration has launched an Executive MBA program that aims to strengthen your expertise.

Developing skills for international management

Start your program in New York, one of the financial capitals of the world, complete your degree requirements conveniently one weekend per month at Kadis Has University while you continue to work, and finish your Executive MBA experience in China, one of the largest emerging markets in the world.

Leadership in the world of international business requires more than solid business knowledge. It takes proficiency in cross-cultural communication, decision-making, and management. Fordham’s Executive MBA is designed to provide just that. It is a flexible, innovative program that develops the skills needed to be competitive in the transnational market place.

In the short term, the goal is to differentiate yourself so that you stand out from the many others seeking the job you want. In the long term, you want your portfolio of career assets to be diversified enough to keep your opportunities open and strong in a constantly shifting environment. This ensures maximum Return on Investment (ROI) over your entire career.

THE GLOBAL MINDSET

Real World Experience & Personalized Attention

Experience business practices and culture in New York, Istanbul, and Beijing. Careers in international business management present a unique set of professional and personal challenges. Our students will tackle these challenges on three continents in a closely knit cohort program where students will move together in one group. It will offer integrated business courses, experienced cross-cultural faculty, and the majority of the program a convenient evening and weekend course schedule that is flexible enough to accommodate both full-time students and working professionals.

World Wise-World Wide

At Fordham, business, networks exist on many levels—across professions, companies, industries, and continents. Executive MBA students benefit from these connections through networking events, group projects, and an extensive global network of alumni.

A WORLD OF RESOURCES

The benefits of the Executive MBA Program

Fordham’s Graduate School of Business is one of the top universities in New York. The school has been ranked in the top 25 nationally by the Wall Street Journal, and its Executive MBA Program was ranked 26th in Top Program Worldwide by The Wall Street Journal on September 30, 2008.

Students will begin the program in New York for one week. The classes will take place at the Kadis Has Campus of Kadis Has University centrally located in the heart of Istanbul for the majority of the program. The last week of the program will take place in Beijing, China where students will be exposed to the cultural and business environment in the People’s Republic of China.

Fast forward your career

Twenty-one months. One weekend of in-class study per month with exposure to business practices in New York and Beijing is all it takes to complete Fordham and KHU’s Executive MBA, a unique program that will prepare business professionals and seasoned managers for challenging assignments on a global scale. From the unique curriculum to the fast-paced schedule, the Executive MBA lets you remain employed and competitive in your field while you earn a fully accredited degree.
